CHILDREN'S STORIES – THE LION AND THE RABBIT, PART 1

Foreward:

These stories are from the Panchatantra, originally written in Sanskrit, are very old. Pancha means five and tantra reflects the doctrines of human conduct. Panchatantra stories depict the wise conduct of life using animals that children love to hear and read about. Every story has a moral and we will leave it up to the parents to teach the moral of the story.

For future editions, we will be prepared to publish stories or articles (original or other) that have an interesting story, fact or message that that you think the younger audience will enjoy.

It is also the intention that simple language be used to convey the story.

Now the story....

Once upon a time in the forest there lived a big lion. All the other animals in the jungle were afraid of him because he would hurt them without any reason. The lion hurt many animals every day. So, one day all of the animals got together and decided that they should do something about this or else they will all get hurt and soon the forest would not be lively.

Since they were all afraid of the lion they decided the best thing to do would be to meet with the lion and talk, but they were afraid for the lion was big and powerful!

The all animals came together as one big team and went to see the lion. When the lion saw all of the animals together, he roared and then roared even louder. He thought to himself, silly animals they have made my task easier to hurt them. He roared again.

The animals trembling in fear and in a weak voice said to the lion, you are the king of the jungle and we are simply living here. If you continue to hurt so many animals every day, then there will no one left to hurt!

Therefore we have come up with an answer—one of us will come to you every day for you hurt. The lion agreed for it makes his life easy and said yes. The lion also said that if they do not come, then he will go back to his old ways.

The animals went back to the forest and everyday they decided which one of them should go to the lion.

This was happening for many days, then one day it was the turn of the rabbit. The rabbit is a small animal and did not want to be hurt by the lion. But he was so small, what could he do?

He started walking towards the place where the lion lives and thinking hard on how he could save himself and many of his friends from the lion...
